The above is a list of candidates nominated in the Addison Advertiser and Woodhull Sentinel Circulation Campaign. The votes opposite the names are free. According to the rules of the campaign, the candidates reserve the right to withhold their votes and cast them at a later date.

The race for the Chevrolet Sedan, the Ford Tudor Sedan and the other valuable prizes the Advertiser and Sentinel are giving away as awards is its $2,500 Prize Distribution Campaign is now in full swing. But few, however, of the large list of nominations as published this week are actively at work. There has hardly been sufficient time to hear from all of them, but it is presumed that those who really mean business will step into the work now and make an effort to get their names up toward the top of the list. All those who tried and made an effort at all secured some subscriptions for the Advertiser or Sentinel and will now be able to go ahead and compete for the big prizes. It is our purpose to remove the inactive workers' names from the list just as soon as we find out they are weakening and are not making effort to protect their names and interest in the campaign. It will not be many days before the real workers will come to the front with a handsome percentage allotted to them for their activity.

Small Receipts

The receipts for the first report were far below expectations, and while many of the contestants have worked hard, they have not produced anything like what we thought they would. However, the race is young yet and our disappointment may yet be overcome.

The Advertiser and Sentinel is standing behind the expense account of $2,500 on this deal and it will take some real hard work on the part of the contestants to pull the papers out even. But regardless of the amount of money taken in, the prizes will be awarded just as announced in the beginning of the campaign. Our loss, if any, will be the workers' gain.

Has Public Approval

The stamp of public approval has already been placed upon our campaign. Nothing but words of commendation have come to this office on the liberality, fairness and squareness of the whole proposition. We are sure that as the campaign progresses that the people will willingly support their favorite candidates by giving them a subscription to this paper. It takes hard work on the part of the contestants to arouse interest in their behalf but if they will just get out and put pep and ginger into their campaign they soon will find out that it is not so hard to get subscriptions. Yet some people can get business when the other fellow says that there is nothing doing. If a worker doesn't believe in himself it is almost impossible to make others believe in him.

Real Race Just Beginning

It takes a lot of character and self confidence to put over anything worth while. It will take these qualities to make a successful fight for one of the prizes that will be given by this paper. Those who finish in the big prize winning class will have to overcome a lot of discouragement. But the reward will be worth the price. $140.00 a week will be the rate of earning of the leading candidates at the close of the race on August 2nd.

A Quitter Never Wins"

Getting ahead in a subscription Campaign is the result of the same principles that determine success in any other kind of business. "A quitter never wins and a winner never quits". Candidates will encounter at all stages of the campaign rumors and discouraging reports of all kinds. These are circulated largely for one or two reasons, both of which brand the report as being prejudiced and hence not worthy of belief.

The majority of those who are active have been slow in getting started, and consequently those interested in sharing this generous prize distribution start now without any serious handicap. Indeed, an active worker, beginning now in any part of the territory, could in a few hours' work equal if not surpass anything that has been done by the present leaders in the race.

Real Work Still Ahead

The real work of the campaign is still ahead and the effort that will determine the prize winner is not that of the best starting qualities but that of the best sticking quality.

Now is the Time

There is plenty of room for more of those active, ambitious people in this section to enter this campaign and get their share of the wonderful prizes and commissions. The territory has not been scratched as yet and no candidate who has entered has any advantage to speak of. RIGHT NOW—TODAY—is the time to begin if you want one of those beautiful cars for your own, so you can take your friends or family out for a ride these fine summer days. RIGHT NOW is the time to nominate yourself. Understand, too, that there will be more votes given you NOW for subscriptions than at later time. This is in fairness to the ones who get out and hustle at the start and prevent someone stepping in at the last moment.

In just a few short weeks this paper will give to some of the people in this community prizes that represent a small fortune. Ambition, energy and plenty of pep are the only requisites for success.

The first step toward winning the Chevrolet or Ford is filling out and sending in the ENTRY COUPON which will start you off with 10,000 votes.

Subscriptions Mean More Now

More votes will be issued on subscriptions now and until July 16th than any other time during the contest. Under no circumstances will the votes be changed from the schedule as published in our announcement. Mr. and Mrs. Public, if you contemplate helping a friend and candidate, do it NOW—TODAY while the votes count the most. You will subscribe eventually, why not do it now and help your favorite WIN that Sedan.

"The quitter gives an alibi;
The mongrel, he gets blue;
The fighter goes down fighting;
But the thoroughbred comes on through".

LITTLE CAUSE TO WORRY OVER SMALLPOX

Jasper, June 24—Despite many conflicting reports that have circulated through this section, the smallpox scare in Jasper is practically a thing of the past. Dr. E. E. Wallace, health officer for the town, has stated that the situation is well under control and unless something unforeseen turns up the scare will be over. Dr. Wallace has been performing his duties in a capable manner, and maintains there is no reason for the public to get excited over the matter.

There have been more than 100 adults and children vaccinated with the preventive serum, and this prompt measure has doubtless forestalled any further spread of the disease. Dr. Wallace has stated that the great trouble which always arises in a situation of this kind is due to the public. People are slow to consult a physician who is able to diagnose their condition accurately, and instead submit to attempted home cures.

It is thought that a great many of the supposed cases were nothing but fright, as it is well known that in the time of even a mild form of epidemic, imagination ascribes every ill feeling to the disease discussed. The quarantine measures caused considerable inconvenience to students at regents time, but with the dismissal of school residents should have no great cause for worry.

There was a large attendance at the services of the local Baptist church, Sunday evening when the members of the graduating class, the faculty and members of the Board of Education of the Woodhull High School were present to hear the Baccalaureate sermon by the Rev. Benjamin R. Croft.

The sermon was on the theme, "Pushing Back the Horizon" from the text "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before": Phill. 3-13.

The sermon was an eloquent appeal to the graduates to fit themselves for the future and for positions of usefulness and honor and as they face the problems of life, never to lose sight of the value of the exercise of Christian principles.

The orchestra and male choir rendered a special musical program.

Retrospection Of Woodhull

Foreword

In publishing the series of articles on the early history of Woodhull, The Woodhull Sentinel wishes to express gratitude to the following people for their aid: Mrs. Hattie Hand of Wodohull; Mrs. E. T. Hollis of Woodhull; and Mr. Truman Rice, formerly of Woodhull, now a resident of Addison; and to acknowledge the following sources of information: "History of Steuben County, New York," by Professor W. W. Clayton; "Historical Gazetteer of Steuben County, New York", by Millard F. Roberts; and "Early History of Woodhull, N. Y., and Family Records", by E. T. Hollis.

Scarcely longer than three hundred years ago, the first white settlers came to America, and our country was still a wilderness. Two centuries later the first settler came to this region where the very streets on which we walk, the very roads along which we motor, were virgin forest. Were not the very qualities of heroism shown by the American settlers of our small territory? And colonists manifest also by the early is it not, these pioneer traits as well as endearing associations that make the early history of Woodhull of special concern to us? Each one of Woodhull's pioneers played his own individual part in the history of the town, and makes his own appeal to each one of us.

The first white man to make a clearing in the wilderness which is now our township was Daniel Johnson, who came in 1804.

At that time the old town of Troupsburg included a part of the Woodhull township, and Mr. Johnson was the supervisor of Troupsburg. Daniel Johnson's son Asher, constructed, together with Andrew Colegrove, the first bridge built at Woodhull across Tuscarora Creek.

In 1805, Bethnel Tubbs arrived here and made a permanent clearing. His wife became known throughout the vicinity as a most competent midwife, being employed by many of the settlers in the place of a physician. Also in the year 1805, a great huntsman settled on what is known as the Daniel Buck farm. Seth Graves would often bring home six or eight deer as the result of one day's hunting. His children attended school clad in deer skins which had been home tanned according to the process used by the Indians.

That same year, two other pioneers arrived. They were Squire Wilkes and Caleb Colvin, father of Willis Colvin who came from Rhode Island. These men erected log cabins on the land which they had first cleared, and later, opened communications with other settlements by means of Tuscarora Creek.

The next year, 1806, brought settlers to points north and south of the first farms, but their sojourn was temporary, as the owners remained only as long as game was abundant. Other settlers also followed of whose achievements there are no records. There came, however, in 1806, one whose descendants are living in Woodhull at the present day—Caleb Smith, father of Colonel Jeffrey Smith, Benjamin Smith and Alfred Smith. Walter Smith, Sr., residing at the edge of the village was the son of Colonel Jeffrey Smith. ?

Elijah Kent cleared a farm on the Jasper road before 1818 but died soon afterward. William Wooley, settling on the Lattimer place about this time, later moved to Jasper and from thence to Canada. Several log houses were built in the direction of what is now Hedgesville, by Robert Lanning, Peter Pobasco and Jerry Pike. Now, also, came Samuel Ritch and William Forenter.

The Bebout place was settled now by James Williams and Mr. Hornecker who, finding the location too far back, moved to a point on the creek. This made the first settlement between the village of Woodhull and what is known as "Rowleys". (In 1825, Ashel Bears bought this place.)

Creek to Addison.

Johnson built the first Woodhull bridge, was an unusual hunter and trapper. He made shingles himself and sent them down Tuscarora creek to Addison.

A soldier of the American Revolution by the name of Tilson made his home at a point near the present village. About this time the farm known as the William Olin farm was cleared by a Mr. McBane. Daniel Granger and Thomas Wood resided in the township at an early date. Mr. Granger kept a tavern near the farm known as the J. A. Parker place.

Caleb Butler, the step-son of Daniel Cook followed his father into this region making a settlement in 1819. Ira Paul came from Painted Post to Woodhull in the early part of the century. In 1821 there came a pioneer who was known for his ingenuity—Clark Brown, who setttled the farm later owned by Jent Brown. Mr. Brown was the first carpenter here to use a square rule. After his log house burned, he built the first frame house in the township, using wooden nails which he had made. Sylvester Brown, also an early settler, was the builder of many of Woodhull's older homes. He also served as captain of the state militia.

The year 1821 brought Henry P. Harder to the William Miller farm and Micajah Sherwood, the father of William M. Sherwood. The following year, David Edwards came from Massachusetts to the farm later owned by the Wesley Edwards estate, while David Edwards occupied the Ten Broeck farm. Pulteney Hill was first settled by Hugh Boyd of the town of Pulteney, in 1822. Later, he was joined by other Pulteney residents one of whom was John Stone, who came in 1826. Bethnel Gurnsey took the Jeffrey Smith farm in 1823. In the year 1825, a well known pioneer arrived on horse-back from the Delaware River in New Jersey. This was John

ENTERTAINS SOCIETY FROM JASPER CHURCH

Mrs. Lincoln Lounsbury entertained the Presbyterian Missionary Society from Jasper at her home on the Jasper road last Wednesday afternoon. This has been an annual affair for several years and always comes at this time of year when strawberries are served.

A departure from the usual lesson was made and Mrs. A. E. Frances, president of the society, gave a very interesting account of her recent trip to Cincinnati together with much that was said and done at the large gathering of the General Assembly held there.

Many from foreign lands were present at the assembly who presented the needs of the work by illustrations, which appealed to the people very deeply.

Those attending from Jasper were Mrs. A. N. Bruen, Mrs. Charles Whiteman, Mrs. Clark Dennis, Mrs. Ora Bruen, Mrs. A. E. Frances and Mrs. Harry Marlatt of Honeoye Falls.

AUTO ACCIDENT

A slight accident took place Thursday night on the Towsley Hill, near the schoolhouse, when the brakes failed to hold on a car driven by Jesse Bell and also occupied by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Bell. The car left the road going into a field on the Cornell flat. Aside from being badly shaken the aged couple were uninjured.

"CASTING OUT THE BEAM"

Time is slipping rapidly away, and still the Chicago gangster who shot down Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter, is at large. Goaded by the press and fearful of public opinion, the mayor of our principal crime city has made a few changes in the personnel of his police department and is now, doubtless, hoping with the rest of the political ring which infests Chicago, that the storm will soon blow over so that things can go on as usual.

It has been said of many of our large cities, that the toll of crime is collected because their officers do not do their duty. Out of every big haul made by the gangsters, a certain big slice is first set aside to go into the "protection" fund which dishonest officers are ready to receive for looking the other way when crimes are being committed. That is the insurance money which makes crime flourish in America. If every officer in the city of Chicago was beyond a price, ready to do his duty at all times, the place would be too hot to hold a crook. Gangsters would be as scarce as polar bears at the equator.

Yet the dishonesty of public officials is only one of the reasons why crime flourishes so healthily in Chicago and New York, as well as all other communities both large and small. The other reason can be summed in two words: public indifference. Could our phlegmatic body of citizens be aroused from this state of passivity concerning what happens all around them, there would be no crime problem for the simple reason that criminals would be promptly reported and their activities cut short.

We pause to wonder oftentimes, how in a crowded city like Chicago, atrocious crimes can be committed every day and the gangsters for the most part escape unscratched. Yet, is it any wonder? We in this small community are aware of the commission of crime continually and ordinarily take no stand against it. We see our bootleggers go their undisturbed way, although practically every one in the community may be aware of their nefarious activities. We hide behind the shield of it being none of our business, knowing all the time that if we are true American citizens it is our business.

"Unless Chicago cleans up", is the common plaint; "Where is the country headed?" That is worth pondering, but the kernel of the situation lies nearer at home. Unless we first clean up the Main Streets of the country and grow up strong minded citizens who are big enough for the job, who will ever be able to clean up our cities?

WHAT PRICE GLORY?

The revelations regarding the Pennsylvania primaries show that "Uncle Joe" Grundy spent $291,000 in seeking the Republican nomination for Senator. He spent considerable more than Mrs. McCormick of Illinois, who put up $252,000. But she won the nomination, and Grundy was badly licked. When Newberry of Michigan, was ousted several years ago, it was because he spent less than $200,000. Vare spent $800,000 in Pennsylvania in 1926.

"What price glory", do senatorships represent, anyhow!

APPOINTS LEEDS

Secretary of Agriculture Hyde has reappointed Henry W. Leeds, an outstanding Atlantic City hotel owner, as a member of the Alleghany Forest research Advisory Council. Mr. Leeds has shown active interest in the work of the Council and the action of Secretary Hyde in naming him for a new three-year term indicates appreciation of the volunteer service he has given in aiding a constructive program for timber preservation and forest rehabilitation.

COMMENCEMENT—THE CROSSROADS

This is commencement time. The high schools this year are graduating as fine a group of boys and girls as ever received diplomas.

There are always those who are ready to condemn the present generation as a speed-crazed, pleasure-seeking bunch of hoodlums, but we suspect that this year's class is better prepared to face the world than were their fathers and mothers at their age. Nevertheless we feel it our privilege as elders to offer them a bit of advice for whatever it may be worth.

Recent high school graduates have two alternatives—to go to work or to continue their educations in higher institutions of learning. If they choose the latter, and those with ability certainly should consider it seriously, they must select, in a general way at least, the type of work or profession they wish to prepare for.

Since this is an agricultural community, a fair proportion of the graduating class of Woodhull High School are, as usual, from farm homes. Since these students were old enough to do any real thinking, agriculture has been in a slump and they have grown up with the idea that agriculture has little to offer to young men with ambition and brains. They have seen it and felt it, and in many instances heard it from their parents. Their span of life has been too short for them to appreciate the meaning of such words as cycles of prosperity and depression. They are impressed with only the recent depression in agriculture.

Those who have studied the situation see a brighter side. They say that the crying need right now is for young men with farm backgrounds and training to fill a great variety of responsible and lucrative positions more or less closely related to farming. They tell us that agriculture is on the threshold of better times and that with the great improvements in cultural methods, improved farm machinery, better marketing and better farm finance, the opportunities are unlimited for young men from the farms who have the ability and will to fit themselves for the ever-increasing number of good positions.

Agriculture is a business, in fact, the biggest industry in the country. It has room for big men.

"ENFORCING" THE NATIONAL ANTHEM

A national anthem cannot be "enforced", prominent patriots and music lovers asserted in an inquiry just completed by the Women's Home Companion.

"If a national song cannot hold its place in the hearts of a people without wire-pulling and legislative decree, it is not truly an expression of a country", Helen Tufts Bailie replied on behalf of American women. Such an anthem, written at any given period in the development of a nation and bolstered up merely by law, is useless, the symposium brought out.

"Times change—the national mood changes", the women's jury decided. "Americans in each succeeding generation will cherish those songs which seem best to express both old traditions and new aspirations. An act of Congress might compel the performance of certain songs on public occasions, but it can never force the people to keep genuinely alive a song they do not like.

The jury's objections to The Star Spangled Banner were that it is too war-like and gives children a one-sided idea of patriotism; that it is a drinking song originally roared in British taverns. Further objection was that it is an "occasional" song, inspiring in a great national crisis but is rather flat at other times. Some of those interviewed added that it is unsingable except by experts.

AN HONEST ADMISSION

What we are going to do when the timber all plays out has been a question that has been exercising the minds of thoughtful people for a good many years. The timber line has been moved further and further West and South. The answer seems to come from a source that cannot be disputed. "Substitutes" says the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, "are growing in favor while lumber is declining in favor".

Wholesale use of substitutes for lumber may eventually solve the problem of receding forests which seemed to be so critical in this country, so short a time ago overgrown with virgin timber.

LONGER LIVES

Life expectancy in the United States is now fifty-eight years. Fifty years ago forty-three was the figure. So it will be seen that if children mind their ma, and husbands hold tight to the apron strings of their wives, that longevity may increase. In the middle ages the average duration of human life was only twenty-five years.

The Way of Life
By BRUCE BARTON

NO PROFIT ON THE CORN

Occasionally somebody visits my place in the country who entirely misunderstands its purpose.

* * *

"That's a beautiful lake," he says. "You should stock it with fish, and make money".

To which I answer that I don't want to make money.

* * *

He is sure he has not heard me correctly, and so he continues,

"Some of your land is pretty well run down, but if you would put on plenty of fertilizer for a couple of years it would produce valuable crops".

"I don't want to produce crops", I say a little louder.

He looks shocked, but tries again.

"Why don't you buy some of this wood-land and raise foxes?"

At this I am tempted to set our dog on him. Our dog is symbolic of the place. He is good for nothing. He barks at friendly visitors, and once he slept soundly while the house was robbed.

* * *

Instead of committing any such inhospitality, however, I try patiently to explain that this country place was not bought for profit, is not conducted for profit, can not possibly show a profit, and, if it could, would not be so dear to my heart. It is a beautiful, inefficient and wasteful oasis in a rushing, efficient world.

Money is a grand possession, an essential measuring stick. But there are some people who seem to think that there is no other measuring stick, that nothing is justified unless it is producing income, or increasing in value.

Such folks should consider the lilies of the field, which sew not neither do they spin; yet by simply being their beautiful selves justify their existence.

They should learn wisdom of Henry Ward Beecher, who once bought two little pigs for two dollars, fed them twelve dollars' worth of corn, and sold them for ten dollars.

"Thus I made eight dollars", he exclaimed triumphantly, "on the pigs". And added, "I never expected to make any profit on the corn".

New York is my pigs. I make my profit there. But I never expected to make any profit on my home, my children, or my place in the country. And I never shall.

REVIEW—THE LIFE OF CHRIST

Matthew 16-28

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

For six months the lessons have followed through the record of the life of Jesus as given by Matthew. During the past three months the period has been about nine months in length and marked a new method of teaching. Previously public address had been before crowds and many miracles had been wrought as seals upon His teachings. A new method followed the appeal of the crowd, after the feeding of the 5,000, that He become their bread-making King. Thence He began to train the Twelve for the ministry they must undertake after His departure.

A natural beginning in this review lesson is to read the portions in Matthew that are covered. They are chapters 16-28. The quarter opened with the quiz class near Mount Hermon when Jesus asked what people thought about Him. In reply to the direct question about the opinion of the disciples Peter gave the declaration in the Golden Text for today: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God". It will be helpful if you will commit to memory the Golden Text for each of the thirteen lessons. They will also be very suggestive in reminding yourself of the central teachings in each of the lessons.

The territory covered is from Caesarea-Philippi back to Capernaum and then on the further side of Jordan, through Perea, to the fords of the Jordan opposite Jericho and thence the climb to Bethany and the Holy City. Either follow each place on a map as you read the above named chapters or, better still, draw an outline map of Palestine and fill in the details as you read. Draw lines to indicate the journey that was traversed.

Frequent use is made of parables in making the meaning of His profound teachings clear. There must have been many pauses by the wayside for special instruction during the three months spent in Perea. For additional incidents turn to Luke 13-19. A Harmony of the Gospel is invaluable in all such study. That by Dr. A. T. Robertson is recommended.

One of the outstanding principles enunciated by the Master Teacher was an indication of the place that a little child should have in the estimation of the people. Wreckage is found in adults but tremendous possibilities are latent in the average youth. He made a child the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven, and the world has not caught up to that idea even now. Wonderful progress has been made, however, since Robert Raikes started the school in Gloucester, England, 150 years ago which has developed into the modern Sunday School with a membership throughout the world of over 33,0000,000.

Then came the Last Week, centering around Jerusalem, which has become an anniversary season throughout the earth. Bethany was the headquarters for a number of days. From there the Triumphal Entry was made into Jerusalem. Teachings of abiding value were given at every opportunity. Even the most bitter enemy was not excluded from the instructions that were given in Temple area and on the Mount of Olives. The Jewish Passover was ceremoniously observed and then the Lord's Supper was instituted in the same upper room. Following the prayer season in the Garden of Gethsemane, Judas came with his dirty kiss, which all too soon brought the Saviour to His work of atonement on the cross at Calvary. But that was not the end as the disciples learned to their renewed joy on the day of resurrection. All these truths are for our good that we may live the Jesus way.

The bulletin, Results of Sweet-Corn Suckering experiments, may save some work if you are accustomed to pulling suckers. Write the Mailing Room, Roberts Hall at Cornell University for a copy. It is free.

Blackhead will be prevented in a flock of young turkeys if they are kept entirely separated from mature turkeys and from all other poultry, and from buildings or soil where other stock has been allowed to run.

HUMORETTES

"That customer over there says his soup is not fit for a pig", said the waiter.

"Then take it away, you idiot, retorted the manager, "and fetch him some that is".

Boxer's second: Buck up, old man. Think of all your ancestors who have died fighting.

Losing fighter: That's just what I'm thinking about.

"Yes, I'm a cosmopolitan. My father was Irish, my mother Italian, I was born on a Swedish ship off Barcelona, and a man named McTavish is my dentist!"

"What's McTavish to do with it?"

"Why, that makes me of Scottish extraction!"

The perspiring film director dropped to the ground after finishing a hot outdoor scene. Looking around he saw a dummy of old clothes and straw.

"Heavens!" he yelled, "who was it we threw over the cliff!"

"I don't see how you can afford to take so many girls to expensive restaurants.

"That's easy; I always ask each girl, just before we go in, if she hasn't been putting on weight".

IN THE Radio STUDIOS WITH ALBERT ZUGSMITH JR

Police whistles blew . . . traffic stopped . . . an ambulance with screaming siren dashed through the brightly lit theatrical district of Broadway. Yet within the ambulance were no injured or dead. It seems that Ginger Rogers, radio, screen and stage star had but nineteen minutes to get from her show "Top Speed", in the heart of New York's most crowded section, to the Brooklyn Paramount Theatre where she was scheduled to broadcast. A certain radio station's officials, after racking their brains how to accomplish the seemingly impossible, thinking of airplanes and dirigibles, finally hit upon the idea of hiring a private ambulance to transport the charming Ginger to the theatre.

P.S.—She made it.

Force of habit is a strange thing. Paul Specht's Orchestra, a WABC feature, played for Sunday night services at the Manhattan Towers Church. This was truly an innovation in church circles—a jazz band substituting for an organ and choir. But Paul had to catch himself, too often, starting to make a bow at the end of a number. Another band is taking his place.

Secretary Lamont recently announced that in the 1930 census, house-wives would be classed as "Home-Makers" instead of being listed under "No Occupation" as heretofore. Ida Bailey Allen, founder of the Radio Home-Makers Club, has expressed to Mr. Lamont her gratifications on behalf of the 800,000 women members of the club. They broadcast daily over the CBS chain.

DID YOU KNOW—

That all announcers of the British Broadcasting Company are Oxford men? They believe their accent to be the purest English.

That out of the 2,000 applicants who tried out for jobs as announcers at the National Broadcasting studios recently, only one got a job? He was the elevator boy in the building.

That in England they call tubes "bulbs?

That Bob (Believe It Or Not) Ripley says, the man who went safely over Niagara Falls in a barrel was run over by an automobile three years ago.

Cultivation is valuable as a control for weeds and not to make a soil mulch. This applies to corn as well as vegetables.

The market pays a premium for fruit of good size, color and quality. Thinning may be depended upon as an effective means to attain these market requirements.

Eggs that are stored in water glass need not be put down all at one time; they may be added as convenient.

TODAY AND TOMORROW
By FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

ZEPPELINS

People of the eastern part of the United States have just had another glimpse of that gigantic monster of the air, the Graf Zeppelin. In the teeth of terrific storms the great German airship crossed the South Atlantic from Europe to Brazil, then flew northward to New York and east across the Atlantic to its home port on Lake Constance.

This trip, added to its flight around the world last year, has removed the last doubt as to the practicability of aerial navigation, and American capital is rushing in to invest in the manufacture of Zeppelins in this country and to establish regular passenger and express routes between the great centers of population.

For high speed and comparatively light loads the airplane will remain unchallenged, in all probability. But the dirigible balloon has definitely arrived as a means of everyday transportation.

GAS

The one remaining domestic handicap which makes women discontented with life in the country towns is the necessity of doing their cooking and water-heating with wood or coal, which makes too hot a fire in the summer, or with electricity, which is decidedly expensive, or over oilstoves, which is slow. For cooking purposes the gas which city people use is concededly the most satisfactory fuel.

A bank in Indiana, finding itself with a bankrupt gas company on its hands, investigated the possibility of bringing in compressed natural gas from Oklahoma. The experiment worked, and the people of Linton are getting the new gas at the old price, in the old way, while the expensive production plant in the old town has been abandoned.

This seems to point a way whereby every community, however small, can have its gas mains and use this handy fuel as well as in the cities.

NEWSPAPERS

According to the American Press, there are 160 newspapers in the United States which have been published continuously for 100 years or more. Of these, 65 are dailies, 95 weeklies.

One of the weeklies, the Annapolis, Maryland, Gazette, is more than 200 years old, having been established in 1727. Five papers still in existence were published before the Revolution. The oldest of all dailies is the Hartford, Connecticut, Courant, founded in 1764.

We are accustomed to think of 100 years as a period of time before which nothing of importance existed in America. The evidence of these old newspapers helps us to realize that 100 years is not such a very long time. There were settlements west of the Mississippi 100 years ago, on such firm foundations that the communities and the newspapers established then have flourished ever since. Two newspapers in Iowa, one in Arkansas, one in Missouri, are in the list of these centenarians of the American Press.

These and the rest have survived because they filled a need of their communities, the need of interchange of ideas and of news. Neither radio nor the out-of-town daily can ever put such community papers out of business.

CHURCHES

Long steps toward the union of the different Presbyterian churches of the United States, together with the Reformed Church in America, into a single denomination with more than 3,000,000 members, were taken the other day by the Presbyterian General Assembly. Such a union recently took place in Scotland, home of Presbyterianism.

The next step, still some distance ahead but being considered with great seriousness by church leaders, is the reunion of the Methodist Episcopal church with the other offshoot of the Church of England, the Protestant Episcopal Church in America. And some religious leaders are looking farther than that, toward the ultimate merger of those and the Presbyterians into one great Protestant body.

AIR

Air and water do not seem to most of us like raw materials of industry. Yet one of the largest industries in America uses nothing else but the air from above and around its factory and the water from the river which flows past it.

This is the plant of the Dupont interests in West Virginia which extracts nitrogen from the air by first compressing the air until it is a liquid, then mixing with it hydrogen gas obtained from the water by electrolytic decomposition. The result is ammonia, which is the handiest form of fixed nitrogen, whether you are going to use it for fertilizer or for the manufacture of explosives.

A similar process is to produce nitrate fertilizer in huge quantities as well as explosives for the Government at Muscle Shoals—maybe.

Chapter XVII.
THE SPIRIT OF LIBERTY GROWS

From the ranks of King's College came Alexander Hamilton with his artillery squad, to drill on the Common.

IN the time of Stuyvesant, the Common was a public pasture for cows. To its open fields the town cowherd drove his charges up the trail that was to become Broadway, and at night a shrill blast from the horn that hung by every farmer's gate announced the herd's safe return. By 1775 the Bridewell Prison overlooked the Common, which had become a militia drill ground as well as a public meeting place.

But before that day New York had many throes to suffer. There were frequent epidemics of yellow fever; there were increased quarrels between the British Parliament, represented by the governors, and the assembly, representing the people. The chartering, in 1754, of King's College (now Columbia University) was one of the signs of the times. This instituton, paid for by public lotteries, was founded, said Parliament:—"to prevent the growth of republican principles which already too much prevail in the colonies." Unfortunately for Parliament's intention, the period of the American Revolution found the student ranks of King's College filled with eager young patriots—and from their number came Alexander Hamilton with his intrepid artillery squad to join the Sons of Liberty.

The winter of 1741 was an especially hard one, with the East River frozen solidly over so that teams could be driven across to Long Island. In February, an event occurred that was to plunge the city into a terrible tragedy. Robert Hogg, who lived on the corner of Broad and South William Streets was robbed. The theft was found to involve a low tavern keeper, his wife, and Mary Burton, their servant. While their case was pending, fires began to break out in different parts of the city. The governor's house in the fort was partially burned, and by the time nine of these fires had been discovered and checked, the public mind was thoroughly saturated with terror. The dread whisper of a negro plot went from lip to lip and the town quite lost its reason. A reward of one hundred pounds was offered, and Mary Burton began to remember amazing things. As fast as she implicated them, negroes were taken into custody, and in the hope of escaping a hideous death, these, too, began to throw the blame on others. Over a hundred of the poor wretches were imprisoned, hanged, or burned at the stake. Then Mary Burton got around to naming reputable people. The public was startled, and woke up from its nightmare, too late, however, for its innocent victims.

In the meanwhile, the English Parliament was losing patience with New York; privateering had become worse than ever during the long war with the French; the old Navigation Act was openly violated because it demanded that the colonies restrict their trade to English ports and vessels; and the prosperous merchants of New York steadily refused to vote generous sums for British officials to spend. The bold tone of their refusals was moreover beginning to echo in the other colonies.

British ministers looked at the luxurious homes of the stubborn merchants, especially at the Walton mansion in Pearl and Franklin Streets, and shook their heads. Something had to be done to make colonial possessions yield better dividends.

In 1762, the New York Assembly was given a choice: either it must vote an appropriation for the British troops stationed in the fort, or else it could pass no laws whatever. New York accepted the challenge, and for two years not a single measure was voted upon. That the New Yorkers were guided by a principle, and were really generous at heart, was proven again and again. For example, when the needy Methodists built their meeting house in John Street during this time, every creed united with them to help complete it. However, the assembly finally gave in, and voted the appropriation.

Then more alarming rumors began to drift across the Atlantic; it was said that Parliament planned a Stamp Act as a means of collecting taxes from her unwilling colonies. This possibility at once divided New York into two parties, the Tory Loyalists and the Whig Republicans. The latter formed the majority of the assembly at the moment, and a formal protest was sent to the king. At the same time, this party wrote to the other colonies and it was decided to call a Stamp Act Congress in New York. John Cruger, Leonard Lispenard and William Bayard drew up a remonstrance, addressed to the British House of Commons.

In spite of all this vigorous protest, ships arrived in the harbor with the stamps. A group of impulsive young fire-brands had organized themselves into the Sons of Liberty, with Isaac Sears, John Lamb and Alexander Mc Dougall at their head. They caused the bells to be tolled and flags put at half mast; they burned the effigy of Lieutenant-Governor Cadwallader Colden, and they intimidated General Gage, who was in charge of the fort, into giving up the stamps to the mayor, who promptly locked them up in the City Hall.

The next day, a group of merchants assembled in Burns' Coffee House and drew up a Non-Importation Agreement by which they bound themselves to boycott English goods, although this would be ruinous to their own fortunes. It was an act of unselfish patriotism. The merchants who met at Burns' Coffee House were highly respected citizens from the old, conservative families and their act stiffened resistance throughout the colonies. In addition to drawing up the agreement, they established a Committee of Correspondence with New England and Virginia. Because of their common cause, the colonies, under the leadership of New York, were beginning to think together.

While the stamps remained securely locked in the City Hall, and men began wearing homespun; while British ships guarded the harbor and prevented merchant vessels from trading, commerce came to a full stop. Then Pitt's eloquence spurred the British Parliament to repeal the obnoxious Stamp Act. This triumph deserved a celebration, and the New York Provincial Assembly erected a statue to George III in Bowling Green, while the Sons of Liberty, much to the chagrin of the garrison soldiers, set up a "liberty pole" on the Common.

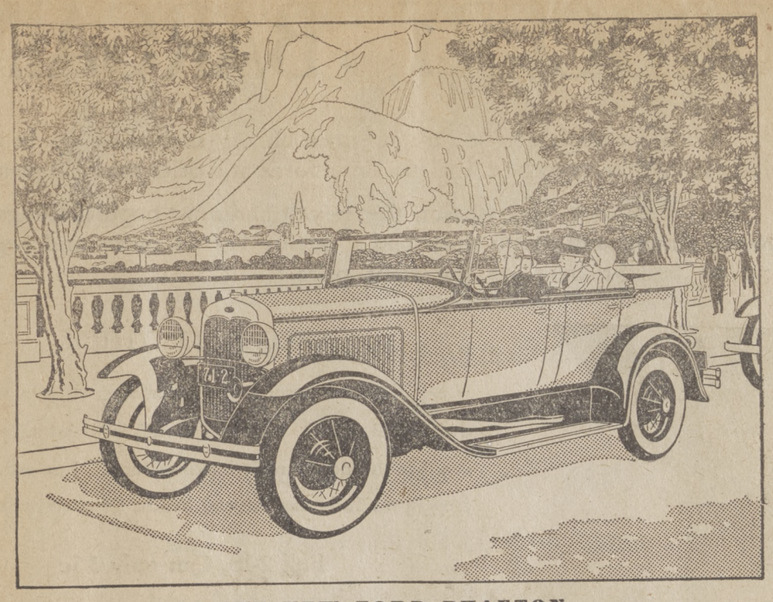
SMOOTHING YOUR PATH ALONG EVERY HIGHWAY

Specially designed springs and four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers contribute to the riding comfort of the new Ford



THE NEW FORD PHAETON

ONE of the fine things about driving the new Ford is the way it takes you over the miles without strain or fatigue.

Mentally you are at ease because you are sure of the mechanical performance of the car. No matter how long the trip, or rough or devious the roadway, you know it will bring you safely, quickly to the journey's end.

Through thickest traffic, up steepest hills, along the open road, you will drive with security and confidence because the new Ford is so alert and capable and so easy to operate and control.

The steering wheel responds readily to a light touch. Gears shift smoothly and silently. Brakes take hold quickly and firmly even on rain-swept streets. Unusual acceleration, speed and power are especially appreciated in emergencies. A space but little longer than the car itself is all you need for parking.

These features simplify the mechanics of driving and, together with reliability, add a great deal to the mental comfort of motoring.

Physically, too, you will feel fresh and relaxed in the new Ford because it is such a roomy, easy-riding car.

The restful, well-upholstered seats invite you to sit back and relax and enjoy the panorama of the passing miles. Steadily, evenly you travel along because of the specially designed springs and the four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers. They cushion the car against hard jolts and bumps, reduce bouncing, and smooth your path along every highway.

See the nearest dealer and have him take you for a demonstration ride in the new Ford. Then you will know, from your own experience, that it brings you everything you want in an automobile at an unusually low price.

MAY CAN CHERRIES BY TWO METHODS

May Be Cooked in the Can or in Kettle, Says Miss Brewer—Will Keep Well Without Sugar.

Cherries to be canned may be cooked in the can or cooked in the kettle, according to Miss Lucile Brewer, food specialist at the New York State College of Home Economics, Cornell University.

When using the cooked in the can method, pack the cherries in the jars with hot sirup and adjust the rubber, cover and upper clamp, thus partly sealing the jars. Place the jars on a rack in a hot-water bath that covers the tops to the depth of one inch. Bring the water to the boiling point and boil for sixteen minutes. Remove the jars, seal them and invert them to cool.

When cooking in the kettle, boil the cherries in the sirup until they are tender, then with a clean spoon slip them carefully into a jar that has been thoroughly cleaned by being boiled for twenty minutes, and fill the jar to overflowing with sirup. Adjust the rubber, which has been in boiling water five minutes, and the cover, which has been sterilized with the jar. Seal the jars immediately and invert them to cool.

To can sour cherries, cover the pitted fruit with boiling water and let it stand fifteen minutes. Drain the water from the cherries, measure it, add an equal amount of sugar and boil for ten minutes. Add the cherries to this sirup, heat to the boiling point and seal in clean, hot jars.

The pits may or may not be removed. The fruit keeps its shape better when the pit is left in and with some varieties the flavor of the pit is desirable. Cherries hold their color, flavor and shape better if they are canned with sugar than if canned without it, although they will keep perfectly with no sugar. Even so small an amount as one-sixth the measure of fruit usually gives better results than no sugar at all.

A small amount of cranberry juice added to the sirup when it is made gives a bright color and an improved flavor.

Lattimer whose son later occupied his father's first settlement.

Two brothers arrived in the township of Woodhull, one year apart—Edward L. Stroud came in 1825 and his brother in 1826. The year 1825 was rich in its contribution of Woodhull pioneers, bringing also Charles Wildrick to the Holt farm, James Brownell who was for several years postmaster of East Woodhull, and Lyman Andrus. In 1826 there came Thomas E. Sly, father of William Sly, a pioneer who surmounted more than the usual obstacles.

Worcester Perry cleared a farm near Hedgesville after opening the Pierce road so that his wagon could go through. After losing two cows through accident and injury, he had his home destroyed by a tree which he was felling. Undaunted, he removed his family to another place and rebuilt his home that winter.

Hedgesville derives its name from Thomas Hedges who came in 1826. His settlement in the township was followed that same year by those of Samuel, Jacob, Joseph and Edward L. Stroud. Below the J. A. Parker place, in 1828, there settled Mathias Marlatt, the father of Christopher Marlatt, who built a log house on his farm. At about this time came General Ransom Rathbone, a veteran of the war of 1812. John R. Pease, who settled on the Daniel Buck farm was collector for the town of Woodhull and a prominent business man.

Up to 1827 the southern part of the village remained undisturbed. In that year, John Brimmer built a log cabin on Elk Creek near the Tuscarora town line. In that year, also, Seth Baxter arrived and the year 1830 brought Albert Park who was a prominent lumber dealer. He established a mill settlement known as Parkville, soon after George Northrup. The next year brought Daniel Christian and the year 1832, Alonzo Foote.

The southern section of Woodhull township held five or six families, those of Benedict Northrup, Herman Greenslate, James Aiken, Lewis Fenton, Warren Northrup, Ranson Northrup and William Lewis, and the valley two thereof, Eli Terry and James Christian. Except for the Rozier mill, however, the higher land near the center of the town was not settled until 1835.

GREATEST TRANSCONTINENTAL ROAD FOLLOWS THE OLD SPANISH TRAIL

By the end of 1931 it will be possible for a motorist to start from Maine and drive to San Antonio, Texas, without ever getting off a hard road. Within another two or three years the motorist can continue his journey to California, over hard roads all the way.

With all our progress in road building, there is today not a single route across the Continent which does not involve driving over hundreds of miles of roads which nobody could classify as good and which most motorists, accustomed to the paved highways of both coasts and the Great Lakes region, would classify as positively bad. But with the completion of the Old Spanish Trail we shall have a highway connecting the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans, a highway paved or hard surfaced throughout its entire length, a transcontinental highway which will be passable at all seasons of the year, since it is located throughout its length far to the south of the snow-belt, which makes the more northerly passages impossible in winter.

It is no wonder that the United States Government is aiding liberally in the construction of this road which will give the speediest possible route for the movement of motorized military forces from one coast to the other.

From Maine to Florida the Atlantic Coastal Highway is now substantially completed, either concrete, tar-macadam or hard sand-clay surface all the way. And when it gets to historic old St. Augustine, Fla., it strikes the beginning of the Old Spanish Trail, connecting St. Augustine on the east with San Diego on the west.

The idea of a cross-continent highway which would follow the trade and military trails blazed by the early Spanish settlers on the Gulf and in the Southwest was first given light at a gathering at Mobile, Ala., in 1915. Nobody knows who selected the picturesque and descriptive name, nor just how the movement started. The first idea was to connect New Orleans with Miami. But the West heard about it and eagerly joined in the movement, set up a promotion headquarters in San Antonio, and projected the original plan two thousand miles farther than its original enthusiasts had dreamed of going.

And now it is nearing completion.

Starting from St. Augustine, where the Spaniards have left their indestructible record in the narrow streets and picturesque old fort and other buildings of this oldest of American municipalities, the Old Spanish Trail runs through Jacksonville, Tallahassee, Pensacola, Mobile, Bay Saint Louis, New Orleans, Lake Charles, Beaumont, Houston, San Antonio, Fort Stockton, El Paso, Las Cruces, Douglas, Tucson, Phoenix and so to California and San Diego. It crosses eight states, three great bays and the greatest of North American rivers. It crosses the Great Divide at its lowest point, at Bisbee, Arizona, at an altitude of 6,030 feet above sea-level and descends into the Imperial Valley through El Centro, Calif., 51 feet below sea-level. Yet there are no grades which cannot be driven in high gear.

Two-thirds of the drainage water of the United States crosses the Old Spanish Trail, yet only two ferries are necessary; one across the Mississippi River at New Orleans, the other over Berwick Bay at Morgan City La. All of the other watercourses which the Trail crosses have been bridged.

The Old Spanish Trail follows the line of the chain of missions and presidios which the King of Spain ordered in 1772 to be constructed from the Gulf of Mexico to the Gulf of California. San Antonio was the meeting place of all the trails connecting the Spanish Settlements with each other. And in San Antonio, a few weeks ago, the King of Spain, through the Spanish Ambassador to the United States, presented a royal decoration to Harral Ayers, the managing director of the Old Spanish Trail Association, in recognition of his services in preserving and perpetuating the old Spanish tradition.

Of the first 579 miles of the Trail, from St. Augustine to Bay St. Louis, all but a few miles has been paved, and that part, in Mississippi, is hard sand and gravel. Thence across Louisiana to the Texas line, 362 miles, concrete pavement is being laid the entire distance, though it will be the end of next year before this is completed. The unpaved sections are good gravel roads.

From the Texas-Louisiana line to San Antonio, 329 miles, the Trail is 90 per cent paved. Thence, 583 miles to El Paso, the gravel road is good but dusty and paving is being carried on rapidly, eventually to cover the entire stretch. From El Paso westward across New Mexico and Arizona to the California line is 712 miles, of which about half is paved, the rest gravel roadways over the desert and through the Rocky Mountains. Byt the end of this year it is expected that the last stretch of the 178 miles across California to the Pacific will have been paved.

This great highway, 2,741 miles long, is the largest single piece of road building which has ever been undertaken since the days when the Caesars connected all of the outlying provinces of Europe with Imperial Rome by roads, some of which have lasted to this day and are still main thoroughfares of commerce. When it is finished it will have cost upward of $110,000,000, provided by the states, counties and municipalities and by the United States Government.

As every other great road does, the Old Spanish Trail is opening up new areas of settlements, to industry and to development. Until it was cut through from Jacksonville west, five years ago, few tourists to Florida ever saw the lovely rolling country of West Florida, the hills and rivers and coastline vistas that lie between Tallahassee and the beautiful city of Pensacola. The opening of the Trail has brought new life to Pensacola, which with its magnificent harbor and new rail connections northward is rapidly recapturing its ancient importance as a seaport. And so, all along its route, the growing tide of motor tourists following the Old Spanish Trail is discovering and spreading the news to the rest of the world that in this South and Southwest there are opportunities and beauties which few had ever realized existed.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

"LOWERED RESISTANCE

I seriously doubt if anybody ever contracts disease when what we call "bodily resistance" is normal. Many of us come in contact with disease every day; but because our bodies are functioning normally the infectious germs are unable to find lodging.

The human digestive tract is singularly built to withstand infections. We swallow probably millions of germs, perhaps, in water, milk, raw fruits and other carriers of simple bacteria; these are for the most part promptly destroyed by healthy digestive juices. It is so with domestic animals; they drink and eat much that is impure, yet healthy digestive fluids protect them from disease.

The time, however, when disease producers hop in and make themselves at home is when we are, in general parlance, "run-down" from one cause or another. Overwork is a certain invitation to the entrance of disease germs. This means overloading the stomach for protracted periods, wearing down the muscular system by heavy toil, and tearing down the nervous system by constant grind in these strenuous days. Anything that taxes the system beyond its endurance invites disease, which rarely appears otherwise; so that, when we get sick, we had better cast about for just how we forsook the law of right living.

"Lowered bodily resistance", then, is a factor in almost all diseased conditions. The physician sets in to "clean house" and to restore health by systematic rest for the overworked organs. Unless he can enforce suitable rest, he will have a slow recovery. It never pays to go to work too soon after any illness.

Overwork—overwork! It is foolish. A man may tax his bodily resistance in dissipation—it is overwork just the same, though not in gainful employment. He may habitually lose sleep until his nerves become tired out; disease sets in, and he wonders why. Overdoing may be in pleasurable pursuits entirely. If you are overdoing—quit it before it's too late.

Sleeves are cast for a far more important role in the play of fashion this season than they have been for many years. They are no longer the negligible quantity that they had to remain so long as skirts were extremely short. There would have been something absurdly top-heavy about a knee length dress provided with sleeves of importance.

The revival of interest in slender waistlines has made it desirable to give some emphasis to the shoulders. Sleeveless dresses are provided with shoulder capes or cape collars or are worn with scarfs arranged to give this desirable shoulder breadth. Some women still prefer the sleeveless frock for sports wear but the very short shoulder sleeve is making rapid headway as a rival. Short puffed sleeves and short cape sleeves are found on many of the summer dresses for evening and late afternoon and elbow sleeves no longer look old fashioned. It is a fairly safe prediction to make—that if skirts become fuller, sleeves will also become broader.

The task of giving an up-to-date look to the sleeveless dress is not a particularly difficult one. Cape collars of contrasting material—chiffon, georgette or fine lingerie—may be added. Or you may set flowing or puffed sleeves of chiffon or other light fabric into the armholes of the sleeveless dress. The sketch shows a new spring dress made with removable sleeves of lace to match the collar.

Hints for the Home

Nut Cake

One-third cup butter, one cup fine granulated sugar, one and three-quarters cups sifted flour, two and one-half teaspoons baking-powder, one-half cup milk, one-half teaspoon vanilla, three egg whites, one-half cup chopped nuts.

Cream the butter and sugar. Sift the dry ingredients together; add part of the creamed butter and sugar; add the milk and the remainder of the dry ingredients; beat thoroughly; add the flavoring and beat; add a part of the chopped nuts, cut and fold in the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Turn into tin and add the remainder of the chopped nuts. Bake in a moderate oven thirty-five or forty minutes.

Omelets Are Easy

If you have a special omelet pan this is easy to make. And many cooks can make delicious omelets in any sort of pan. A good recipe is to allow a teaspoon of milk to each egg. Beat the yolks creamy, add the milk, and then fold in the stiffly beaten whites and turn into the pan.

If you garnish the omelet with parsley it looks more tempting, but the parsley must be crisp and green. Wilted, faded parsley is worse than none. Watercress, too, is a good garnish for summer omelets.

Some persons like a sweet omelet for breakfast. One served with crushed and slightly sweetened berries poured over it is tempting.

Hot-Weather Cereal

You can use the prepared cereals for very hot weather if you wish to. Many persons really like them better as the start-off of a hot day than cooked cereals. Boiled eggs are as good as any other kind and certainly they are little trouble. To have them tempting be sure to cook them carefully. If your family likes three-minute eggs, then drop the eggs into actively boiling water and leave them there just three minutes. Don't forget and leave them in fifteen and don't hurriedly draw them out after five minutes.

As a change some hot morning try serving medium thin bread already buttered. In very hot weather butter melts almost immediately on being taken from the refrigerator and a dish of self-melted butter—usually at breakfast in hot weather we are too near the end of the ice to risk chipping off any for the butter dish—is certainly an unsavory thing to look at. The neatly buttered bread slices will prove tempting.

One of the hearty dishes for breakfast that is always appealing in the summer—both to appetite and eye—is an omelet. So if you want something for variety, as a change from boiled eggs—which we have already suggested as being easy to prepare and wholesome to eat—try an omelet.

STATE PRODUCE IN NEW YORK CITY

Strawberries Firmer

New York, June 20—Strawberry buying was moderately active this morning and prices advanced in a firmer market. Receipts were moderate. Hudson Valley strawberries wholesaled from 15 to 35 cents per quart, depending upon the variety as well as size and quality. Oswego County consignments commanded from 25 to 40 cents, mostly 30 to 35 cents.

Lettuce Steady

The market situation and prices showed no material change on Orange County, New York lettuce. Offerings were quite liberal, but a large volume of the supply was unattractive in quality and condition and in consequence the demand was limited. Crates of two dozen heads jobbed out as high as 75 and as low as 10 cents. Most sales were consummated from 25 to 50 cents.

Butter-Cheese-Eggs

The butter market was about steady. Per pound: Creamery salted higher score 33 1-2 to 34 cents; extra (92 score) 33 cents.

The cheese market was steady. Fresh fancy cheese 18 cents per pound.

The egg market closed steady on Friday. Nearby hennery white eggs and nearby hennery browns, top quality, were in best demand with advances of one-half to two cents on some of the grades. Mixed colors remained practically unchanged. The decrease in the receipts is apparently helping the egg market. Per dozen: nearby hennery whites, closely selected extras 30 to 32 cents; average extras 28 to 29 cents; nearby hennery browns, top quality, 28 to 33 cents.

Live Poultry

There was a fairly active demand for real fancy broilers at the wholesale live poultry market this morning, the proportion of fancy to lower grades is small and only the top grade brought the top prices. Fowls, ducks and rabbits sold slowly. Price per pound: Fowls, leghorns 21 to 23 cents; colored 23 to 25 cents; Broilers, rocks, 30 to 42 cents; reds 25 to 32 cents; leghorns 15 to 25 cents.

Country Dressed Calves

Fresh receipts were light all the week, but there was a large number of carried over stale stock on the market all through. Trading was very slow till Friday, when with a more active demand, receivers were gradually clearing up. Prices remained irregular all through. A number of receipts were received in bad order. Market closed still weak, but a better feeling existed. Per pound: Choice 13 to 15 cents, fair to good 12 to 13 cents, small to medium 10 to 12 cents, stale stock lower.

Livestock

The receipts of bulls and cows were light, but the demand was very slow causing prices to decline 50 cents per cwt. Common to medium $5.00 to $6.50. Bulls common to medium 5.50 to $6.50. Vealers were in limited supply. The demand was extremely light and prices declined 50 cents per cwt. Good to choice $10.00 to $12.25; medium $7.50 to $9.50. There was only a small lot of hogs on sale today and the prices obtained were lower. Good 220 pound hogs $10.25. Lambs were in moderate receipt and met a good demand at steady prices. Good to choice $12.00 to $12.50; mediums $9.50 to $11.50; common $8.50 to $9.00. Ewes steady; medium to good $3.00 to $3.50.

Hay

Receipts of hay were moderate. The demand was fairly active for hay of good quality. The market was steady to firm. Timothy No. 1, $29.00; No. 2, $27.00 to $28.00; No. 3, $24.00 to $26.00.

SONG OF MARION'S MEN
(1780-1781)
By William Cullen Bryant

Our band is few but true and tried,
Our leader frank and bold;
The British soldier trembles
When Marion's name is told.
Our fortress is the good greenwood,
Our tent the cypress-tree;
We know the forest 'round us
As seamen know the sea.
We know its walls of thorny vines,
Its grades of reedy grass,
Its safe and silent islands
Within the dark morass.

Woe to the English soldiery
That little dream us near!
On them shall light at midnight
A strange and sudden fear:
They grasp their arms in vain,
And they who stand to face us
Are beat to earth again;
And they who fly in terror deem
A mighty host behind,
And hear the tramp of thousands
Upon the hollow wind.

Well knows the fair and friendly moon
The band that Marion leads—
The glitter of their rifles,
The scampering of their steeds.
'Tis life to feel the night-wind
That lifts his tossing mane.
A moment in the British camp—
A moment—and away,
Back to the pathless forest
Before the peep of day.

Grave men there are by broad Santee,
Grave men with hoary hairs;
Their hearts are all with Marion,
For Marion are their prayers.
And lively ladies greet our band
With kindliest welcoming,
With smiles like those of summer,
And tears like those of spring.
For them we wear these trusty arms,
And lay them down no more
Till we have driven the Briton,
Forever, from our shore.
